TRUMP: 'CERTAIN AREAS' OF BORDER WALL WITH MEXICO COULD BE FENCE

President-elect Donald Trump said in an interview to air on Sunday that certain areas of his promised border wall with Mexico, a key part of his White House campaign platform, could be fence instead. Asked in an interview with CBS' "60 Minutes" whether he would accept a fence instead of a wall, Trump said "for certain areas I would," according to excerpts. "But certain areas, a wall is more appropriate. I'm very good at this, it's called construction, there could be some fencing," Trump said. During his race against Democrat Hillary Clinton, Trump repeatedly promised to make Mexico pay for the border wall, part of his plan to toughen immigration law and secure the border. REUTERS

OBAMA OFFICIALS WORK AGAINST TIME TO WRAP BANKING RULES

U.S. officials are striving to put finishing touches on a slew of banking rules before President Barack Obama leaves office and hands regulatory power to Donald Trump who has vowed to rewrite the existing financial rule book. President-elect Trump will take over on Jan. 20 and his fellow Republicans will have control of Congress and government agencies, allowing the new administration to block or roll back many of the last-minute changes. But by completing far-advanced work on some banking standards in the next 10 weeks, Obama officials would raise the chances that some elements of the regulatory framework will survive. Some rules are meant to flesh out the Dodd Frank Act of 2010 designed to prevent the next global financial crisis. Trump campaigned on a pledge to scrap the law but now he says only some provisions must go to lighten the regulatory burden. REUTERS

LEON RUSSELL, MUSICIAN KNOWN FOR DYNAMIC PERFORMANCES, DIES

Leon Russell, who emerged in the '70s as one of rock'n'roll's most dynamic performers and songwriters after playing anonymously on dozens of pop hits as a much-in-demand studio pianist in the 1960s, died on Sunday at the age of 74, according to his website. Russell, who was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 2011, died in his sleep in Nashville, Tennessee, his wife said in a statement on the website. Russell had endured health problems in his later years, undergoing surgery to stop leaking brain fluid in 2010 and suffering a heart attack in July 2016. Russell's period of stardom as a performer was relatively brief but Elton John, who had once been Russell's opening act, engineered a comeback for him in 2010 when they collaborated on an album titled "The Union." REUTERS

COASTAL STORM APPROACHES

Bolaris' Weather Watch

JOHN BOLARIS
@weathersavior

The big story in the sky today is the supermoon, as the moon won't come this close to the earth again until Nov. 25, 2034.

It will be a spectacular display in places that enjoy clear skies.

As we go into an extra supermoon phase, a storm will be developing along the Carolina coast. Latest computer models show the storm system grazing the New Jersey coast and having much more of an impact on southern New England.

Computer models show most of the significant rain from this coastal storm front falling east of Philadelphia, across southeastern New Jersey and across eastern Long Island.

Significant rainfall is expected in the Boston metro area and the capes, with most of the rain falling during the daylight hours on Tuesday.

The combination of the coastal low and the supermoon will produce minor tidal flooding along all coastal sections from New Jersey to New England. Luckily, we're not looking at a major coastal low, so any tidal impacts should remain on the minor side. The storm system will depart on Tuesday night with dry, blustery weather and seasonable temperatures for the second half of the week.

I do see early indications of a possible New England coastal storm this weekend. At the same time, a modified polar air mass will begin to funnel in from the Northwest, which could potentially leave significant amounts of wet snow in the Berkshire and Catskill mountains. The time frame for this potential wet snowfall would be Sunday night or early Monday.

Fentanyl to blame for rising number of overdoses in Massachusetts

The synthetic opioid is about 50 times stronger than heroin.

ERIN TIERNAN
@MetroNewYork erintiernan@metro.us

This is on track to be the deadliest year on record for opioid-related deaths in Massachusetts.

The state has been grappling with a heroin and prescription-pill epidemic for more than a decade, but has seen an exponential rise over the past three years as the synthetic opioid fentanyl has made its way to the streets.

The drug, which is estimated to be about 50 times as powerful as street heroin, is responsible for about 74 percent of the estimated 1,475 overdose deaths so far this year, according to a Massachusetts Department of

Young man injecting heroin. GETTY IMAGES

Last year, there were 1,574 opioid related deaths—heroin was present in about 65 percent of tested cases. By the second quarter of this year, that number had dropped to 53 percent.

"While we continue to see a decline in the number of deaths involving heroin, the data released today are a sobering reminder of why the opioid crisis is so complex and a top public-health priority," Secretary of Health and Human Services Marylou Sudders said in a news release. "This is a crisis that touches every corner of our state, and we will continue our urgent focus expanding treatment access."

While fentanyl is a pharmaceutical drug prescribed for severe pain, DPH said most of the fentanyl found in Massachusetts is manufactured illicitly.

Health study released this week.

The latest numbers, which tally opioid-overdose deaths for the first nine months of the year, confirm 1,005 deaths and expect another 392 to 470 deaths will be attributed to opioids.

"Current estimates for the first nine months of 2016 are higher than the first nine months of 2015," according to the study.

LGBTQ youth theater wins national arts award

A Boston-based theater has made history as the first LGBTQ organization to receive the National Arts & Humanities Youth Program Award at the White House.

True Colors: Out Youth Theater is the country's largest and longest-running LGBTQ youth theater program. The award is the nation's highest honor for out-of-school arts and humanities programs that celebrate the creativity of young people, particularly those from underserved communities, according to the program's website.

"True Colors' cultural impact over a generation has been instrumental in helping create not only a safe space for LGBTQ youth to express their creativity and tell their stories, but has also contributed to the progress and advances we have seen for the entire LGBTQ community," True Colors founder Abe Rybeck said when his organization was selected as a finalist.

True Colors is one of 12 winners and the only LGBTQ organization on the list. Boston's Inquilinos Boricuas en Acción Youth Development, a nonprofit that fosters socioeconomic, artistic and intellectual growth in 13-to-19-year-olds, also made the list.

First lady Michelle Obama will present the awards at a White House ceremony Nov. 15. It will be streamed live at 2 p.m. at whitehouse.gov/live.

'This is Trump land,' USPS worker allegedly yells in Cambridge

The Postal Service is investigating the incident after reports of racist behavior by an employee in Cambridge.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The United States Postal Service is investigating an incident in which an employee allegedly harassed a man in Cambridge, telling him to leave the country because it's "Trump land."

Yarden Katz, a fellow in the Department of Systems Biology at Harvard Medical School, witnessed the event. Katz sent a letter to the USPS describing what he saw.

"The USPS worker, a bearded white male, yelled at another male [who looked of Hispanic descent]: 'Go back to your country. This is Trump land. You ain't getting your check no more,'" Katz wrote.

The altercation occurred at a Shell station in Cambridge. The man who had been yelled at went into the gas station and when he left, there was "another heated exchange," Katz said.

Maureen Marion, a spokeswoman for the USPS, said that this was behavior was unacceptable.

GETTY IMAGES

"The U.S. Postal Service expects all of our employees to treat each other, our customers and the public at large with dignity and respect," she said in a statement. "Our employees take these expectations to heart, and take great pride in their work delivering for the American public. Any employee who is found to have taken actions that violate our policy and federal anti-discrimination laws will be subject to corrective action up to and including removal from the Postal Service."

The investigation into the worker's actions is ongoing so it's unknown what the repercussions will be at this time, but Marion said that "appropriate correction action" will be taken.

This was not the first or only racist incident since Donald Trump was announced as president. Even in Massachusetts, which voted overwhelmingly for Hillary Clinton, some Trump supporters have harassed residents, including two men who drove around Wellesley's campus waving a Trump flag.

Witnesses said that those men parked in front of a house for African-American students and spit at people who asked them to leave. Though not named by their school, Babson College, the men were expelled by their fraternity.

Drug Companies Fear Release Of New $2 Sex Pill For Older Men

Men in clinical trial see huge boost in desire, strength of erections, and sexual activity without side effects.

NEW YORK - It's hard to believe that in America today an affordable pill that could improve the sex lives of millions of men is in danger of being yanked from the shelves. And it's just because big drug companies fear for their profits.

The pharmaceutical industry is desperately trying to stop shipments of the remarkable new "JackedUp" pill. Big Pharma is worried because men are reporting increased sex drive, stronger erections and more stamina - all without the side-effects and $40-per-pill price tag associated with drugs like Viagra. Clinical results show men feel these benefits within just a few weeks of taking JackedUp's active ingredient.

The pill, made for men over 50, was released early last month. Despite Big Pharma's efforts, sales have already exceeded expectations.

"If you're over 50 and suffering from low sex drive, decreased stamina and inability to perform, low testosterone is the biggest factor. Drug companies do NOT want men to know about this affordable new pill..."

Exciting Benefits

There are very good reasons why sales are booming and drug companies want it gone. Apart from costing just two dollars per daily dose, the clinical results confirm JackedUp's active ingredient is very impressive. It greatly boosts a man's ability to get and keep erections. Stamina during sex also improves.

The product also has a unique ability to help men feel more passion, desire, and sex drive. These impressive benefits come from boosting testosterone levels by up to a whopping 193%. Doctors are astounded by its effects.

Why do drug companies want this pill stopped? Since the "JackedUp" pill is natural, drug companies can't patent it (like they did with Viagra) and make big profits. Plus, if you're over 50 and suffering from low sex drive, decreased stamina and inability to perform, low testosterone is the biggest factor. If you can safely boost your testosterone, you won't need their expensive pills. That's the very reason big business is trying to have it pulled from the shelves.

Strong Clinical Results Worry Big Pharma

Recent clinical trials on JackedUp's active ingredient have made the drug companies more desperate. The trial results were published in major medical journals, and doctors are now recommending JackedUp to patients.

The testing was done on men 40 - 65 years old, and the results were remarkable. The men who took the active ingredient in JackedUp reported major improvements in their sex lives. Their ability to get and keep erections went up by over 200%. Libido and sex drive surged. Even staying power and stamina during sex more than doubled!

Head of product development, Dave McNeill, said the big drug companies weren't worried at first. "They didn't care because the active ingredient can take a few weeks before many men really feel the benefits. But these awesome clinical trials really got their attention. They're learning A LOT of men will wait a few weeks if it means avoiding negative side effects and saving money."

How It Works

The "JackedUp" pill works by helping older men produce more testosterone. It doesn't force dangerous fake testosterone into your body like injections do. Instead, it works with your body to produce testosterone naturally. And the results have been extraordinary. It's like your body reboots itself to feel like it did in the prime of your life.

Initial Users Are Thrilled ...And Worried

"JackedUp has been awesome for my sex drive and performance! I'm worried it may not be available in the future. The idea that it may be taken away just to secure some big drug company's profits is very frustrating."

- Rob H., 49 years old, Colorado Springs, CO

"My wife and I were both sexually vibrant until I had prostate cancer. After my surgery we tried everything my doctor recommended but nothing Big Pharma Worried: Older men are having better sex after taking new JackedUp pill. Clinical trials show active ingredient triggers surge in desire, strength of erections, and sexual activity in older men.

worked. Within a few weeks of taking JackedUp, everything has been functioning beautifully and we've been riding high ever since!"

- Ken S., 78 years old, Phoenix, AZ

Doctors Speak Out

Drug companies are also concerned that doctors are now recommending JackedUp. The active ingredient has strong clinical results and lacks the side effects seen in current drugs on the market. This makes it an easy option for doctors to suggest.

Dr. Laguna-Bedia, a specialist in internal medicine says, "A lot of men think their lack of interest and inability to perform are simply parts of aging. This is just not true. JackedUp can help these men regain a healthy appetite for sex and the physical ability to perform."

"JackedUp works by boosting key male hormones without side effects. The benefits of these hormones to sexual health are well known, but they actually do more than that. Men also report more energy, less body fat and higher motivation," said Dr. G. Pereira, a renowned surgeon in Florida.

Dr. Jacob Moss notes, "I recommend JackedUp if you're struggling with getting and keeping erections or low libido. It's also a great option for men who want to last longer and have more control over when they orgasm."

Special Opportunity for Our Readers

Drug companies are fighting hard to get rid of this product. This is making inventory disappear fast. Thankfully, a special discounted supply has been reserved for Boston Metro readers. But only for those who call within the next 48 hours.

This is the best opportunity to try JackedUp risk-free with their 100% results guarantee.

A Regional Order Hotline has been set up for local readers to call. This gives all men an equal chance to try JackedUp.

Starting at 6:00 am today the order hotline will be open for the next 48 hours. All you have to do is call TOLL FREE 1-800-860-6393 and the company will do the rest.

Due to the possibility of JackedUp being pulled from the shelf, phone lines are often busy. If you call and do not immediately get through, please be patient and call back. Current supplies of JackedUp are limited, and callers that don't get through to the order hotline within the next 48 hours will be forced to wait for more inventory to be produced. This can take as long as 6 weeks.

Tony's Metro Magic collecting toys for kids

Please donate to the Metro Magic annual holiday toy drive during the 2016 holiday season.

In keeping with the holiday spirit of giving, Metro is once again launching Metro Magic, our annual toy drive for underprivileged children in New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

This year marks the seventh anniversary of the toy drive, which was renamed in memory the man who oversaw the project for more than four years, Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-running editor in chief. Mr. Metcalf passed away in 2013 from colon cancer at the age of 50.

Mr. Metcalf lit up every year as he saw the faces of children unwrap their holiday gifts. It is our goal to keep that magic alive.

"Tony felt we should

use the size and scale of Metro to help others and he used enormous dedication and force to execute the project and every year make children in need a little happier during the holiday season," said Metro's Chief Executive Officer Yggers Mortensen.

"I am proud to continue this project in honor of Tony and I hope all our readers, suppliers and members of the Metro team will help to make this yet another great Metro Magic year."

Metro has created a wish list at the Target website that readers can access by going to Metro.us and clicking on the Tony's Metro Magic story on the homepage. You can also use this direct link: Metro.us/magic.

From there, just choose the toys you wish to donate, pay online using Target's secure payment system, and your gifts, along with your name attached, will be delivered to Metro's offices in each city.

So through the rest of November and December, both in print and online at Metro.us, we will be reminding readers to donate.

This season, we hope you will remember the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have gifts to open. Even one small gift can make a big difference in a child's holiday season.

It's good to receive a gift. It's better to give one. METRO

Dream Kardashian is a hit on Instagram

Robert Kardashian and Blac Chyna welcomed their highly anticipated daughter, Dream Renee Kardashian, into the world on Thursday morning. The famous family flooded Instagram with pictures of the newest Kardashian the same day. On Saturday, Rob & Chyna headed home with their newborn, but not before setting her up with an Instagram account of her own.

Baby Dream's account has already been verified by the social media platform and amassed over 380,000 followers. In addition to a photo of herself posted by Daddy Rob, the infant "shared" a picture of herself breastfeeding with Chyna.

Pink has been married to retired biker-boy, former motocross champion Carey Hart since 2006. He also owns a tattoo and clothing company. Prince's estate shuts down Jay Z's offer

After legendary singer Prince was found dead in his home from an accidental drug overdose earlier this year, rapper and businessman Jay Z made a move to purchase the late singer's unreleased music. TMZ reported that Jay sat down with Prince's sister and offered around $40 million for the cherished catalog.

Apparently Prince's estate has made a decision: No deal. TMZ has confirmed that the estate sent a letter to Jay Z's camp saying that they actually aren't down to letting "Roc Nation exploit any of the intellectual property assets of the estate." Yikes. They're also claiming that Tidal, part-owned by Jay, was not authorized to make 15 of Prince's albums available for streaming shortly after his death.

Jackie Chan has finally won an Oscar

Jackie Chan has a career in film that is longer than many of us have been living.

For over 50 years, Chan has been impressing us with his complicated flips, stunts, and martial arts moves in his over 200 films! Such a robust career is certainly an accomplishment of its own. But on Saturday Chan received his most cherished acknowledgement of all: an Oscar.

Jackie Chan was one of four actors who received a lifetime achievement award at the annual Governors Awards in Hollywood, E! News reports. Tom Hanks introduced the 62-year-old and made a toast in his honor. Chris Tucker, the co-star in Chan's successful "Rush Hour" franchise, presented him with the award. In his acceptance speech Chan thanked his fans who motivate him to keep making films and "breaking [his] bones."

We're glad his hard and dangerous work paid off.

Patrick Dempsey and his wife call off divorce

It's pretty common to hear "the wedding is off" from those who break up before they make it down the aisle. It's rare that we get the opposite announcement: The divorce is off! But that's exactly what's happened with Patrick Dempsey and his wife, Jillian according to US Weekly.

Jillian filed for divorce from the 50-year-old "Grey's Anatomy" star in January 2015 citing irreconcilable differences. It looks like she was mistaken. Dempsey confirmed that he and Jillian were back together during an interview with ES magazine in May. US Weekly is confirming that earlier this month Jillian filed to a request to have the divorce papers dismissed. A judge granted the request last week.

This is some refreshing news when the Brangelina divorce still has us questioning the existence of love.

What Danny Glover taught him

Romany Malco, with Nicole Ari Parker and Danny Glover, plays one of a large, dysfunctional family who spend several days together in "Almost Christmas."
QUANTRELL D. COLEBERT

Romany Malco talks "Almost Christmas," crazy families and making a difference.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metrowus

Romany Malco agrees that discussing "Almost Christmas" is a nice break from this year's phantasmagoric election: It's much better to talk about fractured, bickering families than talking about a fractured, bickering nation. In the comedy, the actor, 47, plays the most serious of an extended, dysfunctional family — a politician running for senator who joins his numerous brothers and sisters at the family home with their widowed father (Danny Glover). There, they proceed to fight.

Malco, best known for "The 40-Year-Old Virgin" and "Weeds," is no stranger to in-family roughhousing, even if he tends to view it as a glass half-full, not half-empty.

One reason family

comedies are popular is that everyone's family is almost certainly nuts, in their own unique ways.

When you're doing a film, to a degree there's a heightened reality. This was one of the rare instances where you don't have to heighten the reality that much. That's because families are freakin' bizarre. You don't have to play up anything with family. You can't write the s— that happens with family.

Unlike friends, our family members are people we've been forced to connect with by fate. Totally. That's the other thing people overlook: Family is where you have your biggest battles, but family is who tends to mend your biggest wounds. We feel safest amongst our family, no matter how much they get on our nerves.

Usually I don't like asking about what it's like to work with certain cast members, but you got to spend time with Danny Glover — a very serious man who does great things and champions noble causes.

Danny Glover has a wicked sense of humor off-camera. We tended to keep things PG-13 for the sake of the movie, but off-camera he has a wit that is extremely intelligent. And he has these great stories. Getting to know him got me to a place where I realized I should be doing more with my platform. I'm not professing to be a big Hollywood star and everyone cares what I think. But the few people who do care what I think should be using that platform. And I have been using it since working with Danny Glover.

What have you done?

I have a video out right now with about 4 million views on Facebook called "The Racket of Racism." I talk about the history from the Civil War to the present day, showing the true line of how slavery became the convict state, how it produced free labor prisons. I've had people of all races come to me and say, "I didn't know this. This changes my stance on Black Lives Matter." I've had an older white woman come up to me and say, "I'm devoting my life to this cause." It makes me feel if you share truth and extract your ego and personal issues from the equation, it's just easier for people to understand. And that's what I got chompin' it up with Danny Glover. No matter what, he was always speaking from a place of love.

Playing a quiet revolutionary

In "Loving," in theaters Friday, Ruth Negga and Joel Edgerton play Mildred and Richard Loving, the couple who, from 1958 through 1967, battled anti-miscegenation laws in Virginia. BEN ROTHSTEIN, FOCUS FEATURES

Joel Edgerton talks about making "Loving," a social-issue film that stays intimate.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

In "Loving," Joel Edgerton and Ruth Negga play Richard and Mildred Loving. The names might not sound instantly familiar, but they should be: They were the mixed-race couple who fought anti-miscegenation laws all the way to the Supreme Court, resulting in the 1967 decision that deemed laws prohibiting interracial marriage unconstitutional.

Thing is, the Lovings were just ordinary folks from Virginia who were in love, got married and quietly fought for their rights until ACLU lawyers took it next level. The movie, by Jeff Nichols ("Take Shelter," "Mud"), respects this. It's a quiet, intimate film, without the usual docudrama bombast.

Edgerton, 42, and known for "The Gift," talks to us about not feeling the burden of playing a widely known icon and how there's more than one kind of revolutionary.

Since you're Australian, I don't want to assume you knew this story beforehand, especially because I think it's still a relatively obscure case for Americans.

I was surprised I didn't know the story. But I was more surprised that more Americans didn't know the story, unless you studied law or have a similar situation in your own family. A lot of people have come up to us and said, "This is my grandparents' story" or "This is my mom and dad's story." Not many people really knew about Richard and Mildred. In many ways, I felt like that evened the playing field. I didn't feel like I wasn't able to take on this privileged challenge and responsibility.

It does allow you two more opportunities to explore the characters as actors. They're not massively iconic historical figures everyone knows; they're regular folks who just happen to be involved in a landmark case.

There's a number of different kinds of revolutionaries. The two that come to my mind are the speech-makers, who stand at the podium and kick down doors. They do something knowing they may be in the firing line, or they may wind up in jail, or they may wind up having acts of violence committed against them. [Richard and Mildred] are the kinds of revolutionaries who find themselves unwittingly at the center of something big.

As much as we look up to the Martin Luther King Jr.s of the world, I think we look up at them and think, "Wow, I'm not made of that stuff. I'm glad you're alive and I'm glad you're speaking on my behalf." With Richard and Mildred, perhaps we can identify with them more. We look at them and think, "I could be you. I imagine myself wearing your shoes and walking down your road." We need those people because, again, we can identify with them perhaps better than people who stand 10 feet tall.

It's sometimes tempting to watch a film about such a historical case and think that it's all contained in the past. We still fight other forms of inequality.

This situation still exists. It's happening right now with same-sex couples. It's all a question about the right to have a private sanctuary. In the case of Richard and Mildred, they were dragged out of their homes [by police].

In the case of same-sex couples, they find themselves having to come out of their homes to be vocal, in order to defend their right to go back to that private space.

There's something weird and ironic about having to go out and argue the case with people who should actually mind their own business.

What are the odds?

"Bedroom Farce" looks into the intimate chambers of married life.

@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

Opening night for any actor can be nerve-wracking, but opening a production the week of one of the biggest presidential shakeups of all time? That could be terrifying.

However, Emma Kaye isn't worried. The star of the Huntington Theatre Company's new comedic production of director Maria Aitken's "Bedroom Farce," which opened last Friday, is feeling optimistic and hopeful despite the unusual circumstances.

"It's a strange thing," the Essex, England-bred actress says thoughtfully. "We ended rehearsal early because no one could focus. We hugged and were fearful and hopeful together. But theater was designed to bring about change. If there's a feeling of hopelessness in our lives, to effect change, whether it's to make people think or cry or laugh or emote, it makes you feel a little more useful. If we can use our art as a distraction for people during their process, it makes you feel like you're giving something back. We're not brain scientists or curing cancer, but we can guarantee a laugh."

"Bedroom Farce," written by British playwright Alan Ayckbourn in the '70s, centers on four couples over the course of one tumultuous night. The couples, each in a different phase of marriage (bliss to ... well, blah) find themselves intertwined as each pair attempts to unwind from a night of dysfunction and confusion. While the entire production takes place in three separate bedrooms, the focus of the evening is not quite what you'd think — as in, there's no sex involved.

"We explore the notion of sex in the bedroom without ever bringing the sex into it," explains Kaye, who plays Kate, a newlywed and one half of the young-

Kaye, who moved to America 10 years ago, found her way back into theater through unusual circumstances. Finding it difficult to re-establish herself as an actress following a move and a career break, Kaye began work as a reader for productions during the audition process. When actors would come in to audition for a show, Kaye would read back the other characters' lines while the casting director and director made their decisions. Sound like an easy way to get noticed? Well, says Kaye, it's not so common.

"You hope somewhere along the process they take a look at you and are like, 'Oh, she's actually quite good,' but really, it's a lot of hoping someone will notice you," admits Kaye. However, her break came when a friend recommended she be the reader for Aitken's Huntington production. And, says Kaye, following rounds of auditions, the director turned to her and said, "Right, we've auditioned everyone, but we think we'll give you the lead."

"It was an 'Oh my God, it finally happened!' moment," remembers Kaye. "They looked apart from that huge gap in my résumé and gave me a chance. So much of this career is about luck and being in the right place at the right time, but you still need to work to make it happen. And finally, it just all lined up for me. It's the American dream."

Cooking up 'Martha & Snoop's Potluck Dinner Party'

We chat with series
creator SallyAnn
Salsano.

JENNIFER LOGUE
@jenniferlogue
jenniferlogue@metro.us

The world could use a heavy dose of comic relief right now, and the tongue-in-cheek humor of "Martha & Snoop's Dinner Party" may be the perfect remedy to post-election blues. The show made its premiere on Nov. 7 and teams legendary rapper Snoop Dogg with America's domestic goddess, Martha Stewart, as they cook up a meal as well as some interesting conversation. We chatted with series creator SallyAnn Salsano about TV as cultural diplomacy, Martha and Snoop's friendship and who's the better cook.

First, I've gotta ask: Are Martha and Snoop friends in real life?

It's so crazy. Yes, they are. The first time they connected — I think in 2007 or 2008 — was back on Martha's cooking show. He came in to do a segment and they just like completely hit it off and have stayed in touch ever since. They both literally respect the hell out of each other and understand each other in a way that made our job so much easier.

VH1

At a point when our country is so divided, this show couldn't have come at a better time. Without realizing it, the show is a very powerful thing. Even during its development, there was so much hatred going on in our country. Then you come to our set — you could not have two people who appear to be so different on the outside just worshipping each other. If you look at their two dynamics and their brands side by side, they are so different, but really are very much the same. They're two people that came from, you know, very modest backgrounds that work their asses off to build empires; they are both perfectionists; they both love food; they love friends; they love entertaining; they love music.

Reality TV as diplomacy. Crazier things have happened ...

We even talked about the set and how they divide it down the middle and Snoop was like: "This is my style, this is Martha's style. With that being said, we're not changing for each other but we love each other for it." And, I think if the country looks at it that way, there is a little bit of a message there. Sharing your entire heritage, your family, your life and your traditions, Martha learns just as much from Snoop as Snoop learns from Martha.

I have to say, I had no idea Snoop was so into cooking!

During commercial breaks I literally run up there and grab a bite. I'm like, "Give me a bite, give me a bite," because you're sitting there and you're dying to know. You always expect Martha to be good because it's so clichéd. Like, Martha's is going to be fabulous. On the first day I was like, can Snoop really cook? And I was like: "This is really good." And he was like: "I'm actually offended at how surprised you are!" We all started laughing because it's true. Again, it comes back to the fact that Martha is the cook and Snoop is the singer, you know. And in the end, they are both great cooks.

"Martha & Snoop's Potluck Dinner Party" airs on Monday nights at 10 p.m. on VH1.

HOW TO GET AHEAD

A new book exposes the business of capturing our minds.

Do you feel like you're in a constant state of distraction? You are.

And you can thank the "attention merchants." These tech-age sales agents — they include everything from TV networks and newspapers, to companies like Google and Facebook — are explored in Columbia University professor Tim Wu's latest book.

"Turning on the internet has come to feel like swatting mosquitoes," Wu says.

"We spend so much time avoiding ads, and [marketers] spend all of their time finding new ways to sneakily put them where we can't get away from them."

Of course, a business model that relies on capturing and keeping attention is always going to lean toward the sensational, says Wu, and these merchants have realized that entertainment is the most effective method.

It's one of the main reasons Donald Trump was able to win the election, Wu explains: He was incredibly good at attracting attention. In fact, his campaign came to embody the "strangely irresistible" world of reality television — a platform that relies on the highly unusual and erratic. Traditional newspapers, government officials, and even the president, are all competing with the entertainment industry to get their messages out, says the expert.

People used to complain about sensational television being all about the race for ratings, Wu says. But he contends that's more dignified than the web's aggressive contest for clicks that aims to trap us in a vortex of wasted time.

"I call it the casino effect," he says. "You sit down to write one email, then you click on something and suddenly four hours go by."

Perhaps more frightening is the fact that we carry around these ad platforms in our pockets and are entranced by their glowing screens all day long.

"Imagine you told someone 50 years ago, we're going to have a phone like 'Star Trek,'" says Wu, "but as opposed to doing what they say, they're also going to be trying to make you watch ads all of the time."

We're a free society, yet somehow we're continually being watched and controlled by our devices, he says. Through most of our history, we've condemned countries for keeping files on its citizens, and now we happily hand over personal data to private companies just so we can play "Candy Crush" with our aunt in Spain.

But while it's possible to reclaim our consciousness, explains Wu, harnessing the willpower to disconnect isn't enough. "You have to set up rules and reprogram your own life."

His secret weapon? "I have children," he says, "which forces parts of my day to be completely human."

David Pastrnak looks like the true sniper the Bruins need

Boston's young star is looking to be a bona fide NHL scorer.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

Goal-scoring is such a precious commodity in today's NHL that if you have a talented sniper, you have to do everything you can to cultivate him and make sure he can reach his full potential. Goal-tenders are mostly huge in terms of size and the quality of their equipment has never been better, two of the main reasons why it's become so hard to simply put the puck in the net.

The Bruins (9-6-0) have a sordid recent history of trading away some of the best goal-scorers (Tyler Seguin and Phil Kessel) in the league, but the good news for them is that it looks like right wing David Pastrnak is a budding star in his own way. The 20-year-old Czech and first-round pick from 2014 (25th overall) is currently tied for second in the NHL with 10 goals, the same amount as Penguins legend Sidney Crosby. Boston has won seven of its last seven games while going 6-3-0 on the road this season.

On Saturday night, Pastrnak had the game-winning goal as Boston picked up a 2-1 win at Arizona (5-9-0). Besides the two games that he was suspended for a high hit against Rangers defenseman Dan Girardi (Detroit on Oct. 29 and Florida on Nov. 1), he has scored in all seven road games that he has appeared in.

What's more, he has already matched his 10 goals from his rookie season (in 46 games) and he's only five behind his total goal-scoring output from 2015-16 (in 51 games). While his progression in his third NHL season has been impressive, Pastrnak knows that so much of it has to do with his linemates — Patrice Bergeron and Brad Marchand — who are at the top of their respective games. "It's nice to play with those two guys," noted Pastrnak. "Marchand is everywhere. He's a great player. They're both so strong on the puck and I try to find a spot to get open."

Head coach Claude Julien also deserves some credit for giving Pastrnak more room for growth. In the past, he's been known to have a quick hook for younger players if they made a mistake (particularly on the defensive end). Of course, it helps when you play with two of the best all-around stars in the league. One of the tangible ways that Pastrnak has improved in this campaign has been his strength: Listed at 181 pounds, he'll never be a bruiser (and besides that's not his preferred style) but his one-timers

(like the one he unleashed vs. the Coyotes) are noticeably more powerful.

Teams around the NHL will no doubt adjust to Pastrnak, thus making it harder for him to score at such a high pace. However, with his combination of speed and elite stick-handling skills, it's hard to see him going through too many prolonged droughts. Hopefully Bruins GM Don Sweeney has learned from former GM Peter Chiarelli's (now in Edmonton) fatal mistakes and he won't feel the need to trade Pastrnak for pennies on the dollar anytime soon.

MORTGAGEE'S NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage given by Georgia C. Washington to Fleet National Bank, dated May 4, 2004 and recorded with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds at Book 34453, Page 202 subsequently assigned to U.S. Bank Trust, N.A., as Trustee for LSF9 Master Participation Trust by Bank of America, N.A., successor by merger to Fleet National Bank by assignment recorded in said Registry of Deeds at Book 54550, Page 200; of which Mortgage the undersigned is the present holder for breach of the conditions of said Mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing same will be sold at Public Auction at 3:00 PM on November 21, 2016 at 26-28 Greenwood Avenue, Boston (Hyde Park), MA, all and singular the premises described in said Mortgage, to wit:

The land, with the buildings thereon, situated in Boston (Hyde Park District), Suffolk County, Massachusetts, on the Westerly side of Greenwood Avenue, shown as portions of Lots numbered 7 and 6 on the plan of land entitled "Division 3, Section 6 of the Real Estate & Building Co's Land in Hyde Park", recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds at the end of Book 376, to which plan reference is hereby made for a more particular description. For my Title, please see Deed of Samuel recorded herewith.

Upon information and belief, there is an error in the legal description attached to the mortgage, wherein the moles and bounds are omitted when only a portion of Lots numbered 7 and 6 is being described, and should read: Said parcel starts at a point one hundred fifty (150) feet distant Northwestwardly from the Northern part of Lot numbered 9 on said plan and is bounded: SOUTHEASTERLY: by the other portion of Lot numbered 7 as shown on said plan, one hundred sixty-eight and seventeen hundredths (168.17) feet; SOUTHWESTERLY: on lots numbered 11 and 12 as shown on said plan, fifty-four and forty-seven hundredths (54.47) feet; NORTHWESTERLY: on other portion of lot numbered 6 as shown on said plan, one hundred eighty-nine and seventy-seven hundredths (189.77) feet; and NORTHEASTERLY: by Greenwood Avenue, fifty (50) feet. Containing about 8,948 square feet of land more or less.

The premises are to be sold subject to and with the benefit of all easements, restrictions, building and zoning laws, liens, attorney's fees and costs pursuant to M.G.L.Ch.183A, unpaid taxes, tax bills, water bills, municipal liens and assessments, rights of tenants and parties in possession.

TERMS OF SALE:

A deposit of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS AND NO CENTS ($5,000.00) in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check or money order will be required to be delivered at or before the time the bid is offered. The successful bidder will be required to execute a Foreclosure Sale Agreement immediately after the close of the bidding. The balance of the purchase price shall be paid within thirty (30) days from the sale date in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check or other check satisfactory to Mortgagee's attorney. The Mortgagee reserves the right to bid at the sale, to reject any and all bids, to continue the sale and to amend the terms of the sale by written or oral announcement made before or during the foreclosure sale. If the sale is set aside for any reason, the Purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit paid. The purchaser shall have no further recourse against the Mortgagee, the Mortgagee or the Mortgagee's attorney. The description of the premises contained in said mortgage shall control in the event of an error in this publication. TIME WILL BE OF THE ESSENCE.
